Tell Your Story: Memoir Methods for Researchers

lunch & learn

APRIL 10, 2024
12-1:30pm
LSC 300

What first brought you to advanced research or scholarly studies? What will be your research or scholarly legacy? How do you craft the story of your career to help others understand your work and contributions to a field of study?

Everyone has a story to tell—a memory held onto that begs to be captured and framed, or perhaps released or reframed. Whatever your memoir goals are, this workshop is aimed at helping you get your story out. Modeled after CSU's Military-connected Writing Workshop, this event is aimed at extracting, through targeted writing prompts, memories about significant moments in life. Don't know if you have a story to tell? Come find out! No experience necessary. This session is open to all writers on campus

This session is part of the Write Well series for Spring 2024.
Lunch buffet for diverse food needs will be provided. Register early.

Build your wellness-based writing practice

Ross Atkinson

Ross Atkinson is a Ph.D. student in the Education, Equity, and Transformation Program at CSU. In 2023-24, he received the Dean's Fellowship to pursue research on the impact of writing workshops for veterans.
